ABSTRACT

A method and system for defining a data mapping between at least two data structures is disclosed. The method of the present invention comprises selecting at least two data structures, wherein each data structure comprises a plurality of data elements and analyzing previous data mapping definition information to derive a definition of a data mapping between the data elements of the at least two data structures.